Potbelly Sandwich Shop Opens in Navy Yard

Potbelly Sandwich Shop announces the opening of its newest neighborhood shop at 301 Tingey St., located in the historic Navy Yard neighborhood. Situated at the corner of 3rd and Tingey, the shop resides below the Yards Foundry Lofts and is the 45th Potbelly to open in the metropolitan Washington D.C. area. James Carpenter is the general manager and will head the brand's new operations at the shop. Born and raised in Washington D.C., Carpenter has nearly half a decade of experience in the restaurant industry, fulfilling a variety of roles ranging from baker to manager. Carpenter first joined Potbelly in 2010 as an assistant manager at the Union Station shop. The location is open every day from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. The shop offers delivery Monday through Friday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sky House Commences Construction

On March 12, Urban Atlantic and The JBG Companies, together with their development partners, civic and community leaders and business representatives, celebrated the official commencement of construction for Sky House, two residential buildings totaling 530 units located at the corner of Fourth and M Streets SW.

Sky House is an adaptive reuse of two commercial buildings into two new luxury residential communities. The two tallest buildings in Southwest DC, Sky House will feature stunning panoramic views from a mix of studio, one-bedroom and two-bedroom residences with floor-to-ceiling windows.

Sky House is scheduled to open Fall 2013. When complete, Sky House will have sleek interior designs, upscale fixtures, hardwood flooring and contemporary kitchens. The community is pet-friendly and amenities include a rooftop deck with pool, e-lounge, resident clubroom with gaming elements, pool table and movie screening area, extensive gym, and an outdoor courtyard with sitting areas, TVs, gas fireplace and grills.

District of Columbia Mayor Vincent C. Gray attended the event. "The development of Sky House represents a significant step in the evolution of the Southwest Waterfront, helping to define the area as a premier urban location to live and enjoy the benefits of waterfront amenities, Metro accessibility and a thriving, culturally rich local community," said Mayor Gray, in a press release.

Wharf Planning Update

By William Rich

On February 27, there was a presentation of the Stage Two PUD for phase I of development at the Southwest Waterfront (called The Wharf) by the Hoffman-Madison Waterfront team at Arena Stage. At the presentation, the developers and master planner gave a description of what is planned for parcels 2, 3, 4, 11, and public places including District Pier, Transit Pier, Waterfront Park, and 7th Street Park. The Stage Two PUD application was submitted to the Zoning Commission on February 3rd.

Monty Hoffman from PN Hoffman gave his vision for the project and mentioned some of the refinements made to the plan since the Stage One PUD was approved in the fall. For instance, the proposed traffic circle in front of Arena Stage has been removed from the plan.

What's Next?

Next in the timeline is a set down hearing with the Zoning Commission in April, followed by a presentation to the ANC and vote in May. Public hearings will be held in June and July, with approval anticipated by the Zoning Commission in the fall and groundbreaking in the first quarter of 2013.

At the water's edge, wooden fencing has been added to wrap around the bulkhead and provide a nicer face to the shoreline, especially at the District Pier and Transit Pier. Earlier in the process, a streetcar line was proposed for Wharf Street, but that has been shifted to Maine Avenue due to safety concerns.

Breakthroughs on Parks and Recreation

By Kael Anderson

March was a busy month of planning focused around Southwest's parks and recreation facilities. Fortunately, we have significant progress to report.

First, Randall Recreation Center. Two projects will help activate this relatively forlorn area of Southwest, increasing safety. With the help of Ron McBee, DC Revitalizing Baseball in Inner Cities is now using the fields and adjacent Friendship Baptist Church site. Colloquially known as DC RBI, this is a baseball and mentoring program for children. The church site will host a pitching and batting area. In the remainder of the church site, Washington Parks and People is installing an innovative urban garden. Kidpower, a mentoring organization operating out of Amidon-Bowen Elementary is developing a program for students focused on planned vegetable gardens.

The DC Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) has committed to activating other facilities at Randall, particularly the multi-purpose building that have been closed off to the community. Currently the building is leased to an outside outfit for day care by the DC Department of General Services (DGS). Approximately half of the building sits unused. We're exploring whether the community can use this idle space, even if just for storage.

Lansburgh Park is also slated for more use. DPR agreed to hold its Easter/Spring Event at Lansburgh, scheduled for March 31 from 10 am – 2 pm. The event will include an assortment of activities including gospel fitness, a music stage, roller skating, food and refreshments, poetry contest, and line dancing. We'll be working with DPR to roll-out subsequent events at Lansburgh including National Night Out and SW Unity Day. To get involved in future planning efforts for Lansburgh Park, see the related announcement of the April 28th open house.

Over at King-Greenleaf Recreation Center (K-G), Ron McBee and I have been working with DPR to complete long-deferred maintenance and selected improvements. See the Southwest Neighborhood Assembly's testimony at DPR's oversight hearing held by Councilmember Tommy Wells, which can be accessed at www.swdc.org. Part of the challenge is that the District recently transferred direct responsibility of DPR facilities (including capital improvements, maintenance, and daily cleaning) to the newly-established DC Department of General Services (DGS). For various reasons, DGS has been unable to manage DPR facility needs. Fortunately DPR has been a helpful liaison.

Among the list of newly-completed items at K-G: exterior lights that improve security at the building's rear, new pole lamps, a newly-operable front door, repaired tennis courts, replacement of a bullet-riddled window, permanently patched peep-holes between the bathrooms, additional trash containers and new exterior signage. DPR (via DGS) has also committed to additional items, including a new room divider to allow for dual uses in the multipurpose room, replacement flooring in the basketball arena, repairs to the bleachers so they're once again retractable, and a new surveillance system.

We've also been making progress on the programming front at K-G. On March 10th, I chaired a meeting with Ward 6 Manager Clynnthia Graham and Tonya Plater-McBride attended by over a dozen service providers and stakeholders. In the meeting, DPR staff unveiled

Washington Metropolitan Transit Authority News

Request Additional Bus Service in Southwest

By Kael Anderson

The Washington Metropolitan Transit Authority is currently studying its 52/53/54 bus line, including service currently terminating at L'Enfant Plaza, just short of our neighborhood.

With the last year's termination of three bus lines, the 50's represent a remarkable opportunity to correct for the service losses. Southwest bus ridership along the WMATA's 70s/DC Circulator line plummeted to half of what was before the service cuts. WMATA has been diligently working to improve the operation of the 74. However the introduction of WMATA's 50's line to our neighborhood would be a transformative improvement in our bus service.

More information on the 50's line is available at <http://www.metrobus-studies.com/52-53-54/52-53-54.htm>. You can send comments directly through this webpage. Southwesterners are encouraged to ask for service to be extended to Waterfront Station, a realistic walking distance for most Southwest residents.

Alternatively you can attend a meeting. An open house is scheduled for Thursday, April 12th at the Northern Bus Division in the Community Room at 4627 14th Street, NW between 5:30 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. At this meeting, WMATA will discuss possible 14th Street Line service improvement options with riders. An additional meeting will be held on Monday, April 16th at a site to be determined.

Improvements to WMATA's 74 Bus Underway

By Kael Anderson and Ron McBee

Washington Metropolitan Authority's Route 74 bus will be undergoing minor name, routing, and signage modifications to improve service.

These are recommendations made by the "74 Bus Committee," a steering committee of community stakeholders and WMATA staff. Led by Rhonda Hamilton and Pat Graham, the Committee is a unique collaborative effort to develop a successful new bus line. A demonstration of WMATA's commitment to Southwest, the Committee is also considered a testing ground for improved service region-wide.

Specific Route 74 changes that will be unveiled in the coming weeks are:

The name of the southern destination will be changed from "O and Half Street" to "Nationals Park." Patrons however should understand that there is no change to the physical destination. The objective of this name change is to provide a recognizable destination, particularly for tourists and ballpark patrons.

The Buzzard Point loop will be dropped on June 17th due to lack of ridership. This will decrease the time between buses to approximately 12-15 minutes, making the 74 Bus more frequent and easier for passengers to catch.

WMATA has issued Next Bus installation bids for a number of bus shelters not only on the 74 Bus route but the 70 and 79 routes as well. "Next Bus" is an information display system that posts real-time estimated arrival times at individual bus stops along routes. It is expected these contracts will be in place before the summer. Pepco will then provide electricity to these shelters to effect the Next Bus signage as well as lighting for the display ads. The lights are a welcome addition to the shelters. Alternative power sources like solar were considered but ultimately deemed inadequate power sources.

WMATA is evaluating how to accommodate Virginia Rail Express passenger demand in the morning at L'Enfant Plaza stop. This includes the Route 54 Bus as well as other approaches.

Southwest Resident Bill S. Ashley Publishes Book

Bill S. Ashley, a southwest resident since 1971, has just published a book about his travels over the past 50 years. The title of the book is The Diary of A Compulsive World Traveler.

Ashley knew that he had a love of travel at an early age. However, being brought up on a tenant farm in North Carolina, these dreams had to be curtailed until after college graduation. He is now retired after teaching for 34 years in the state of Virginia, most of those in the business department at T. C. Williams High School in Alexandria. By the time he retired, Ashley had visited more than 100 countries, and now that he has more time to travel that number has now grown to over 200!

Ashley is a member of the Circumnavigators Club and the Travelers Century Club, both of which are international travel organizations with chapters in Washington, D.C. Members of the Circumnavigators Club have been around the world in a single trip and members of the Travelers Century Club have visited more than 100 countries. These two organizations will have their first joint meeting at a luncheon on April 14 at the Pier 7 Restaurant to coincide with the 100th anniversary of the sinking of the Titanic.

Dr. Ashley will attend the April 14 meeting to sign copies of the book for members of those two organizations. This event follows a previous book signing at River Park Mutual Homes on March 8, where he talked about his travels and displayed several items he bought in various countries.

The Diary of A Compulsive World Traveler was published by Xlibris Publishing Company and is available through amazon.com, Barnes & Noble and his website: www.billsashley.com. A second edition of the book featuring Ashley's subsequent travels is highly possible.

Audacious Divas to Host Golf Tournament

The Audacious Divas will be hosting their Inaugural Golf Tournament fundraiser April 25, 2012 at East Potomac Golf Course, 972 Ohio Drive, SW, Washington, DC 20024. Check-in for the tournament begins at 7 a.m. and a shotgun start will begin at 8 a.m.

The two-person scramble includes contests for the longest drive and closest-to-pin, raffle drawings, and a reception following the tournament. The cost is $90 per person or $160 per two-person team, with a 54-team maximum. Sponsorship opportunities ranging from $100 to $750 are available.

For more information, or to register please go to www.audaciousdivas.com/golf.

Founded in 2009 by Debbi Shaffer & Tammy Musselwhite, The Audacious Divas were formed as a team for the Washington DC 3-Day for the Cure. To date the Divas have raised over $40,000 for breast cancer research and awareness. This October, the team will be participating in their third 3-Day event. The Golf Tournament is just one of the many fundraising projects the team has planned to raise money for breast cancer research and awareness. ### Velodrome Coming to Buzzard Point

By William Rich

After several months of speculation, a lease has been signed between Akridge and DC Velodrome, a local non-profit corporation that is bringing a velodrome facility to Buzzard Point. The velodrome will be temporarily located at 1st and V Street, which will eventually become a mixed-use complex.

A portion of the Akridge site may also become part of a new stadium planned for DC United. Over the next few months, a portable cycling track will be installed at the site, along with a small grandstand, public address system, lights, public toilets, and a concessions stand. Parking will be available for 50 cars. The velodrome will host events, as well as offer classes throughout the season.

DC Velodrome is in the process of raising $300,000 to build the facility, which will be up and running at Buzzard Point by June and will be around for the next 3-5 years.

Down the Gangplank: Our Little Pink House(boats)

By Karen Anderson, Gangplank Slipholders Association

Undeniable signs of spring are all around the marina. Winter water is turned off for the year. Recreational boaters we haven't seen since Thanksgiving are out in force, getting their boats ready for the season. And it's not just blooming across the Washington Channel and around the Tidal Basin, but here at Gangplank, too, as our little pink houseboats get all lit up for the SW Waterfront Fireworks Festival on April 7.

A lot of us can't resist a chance to deck our docks and boats in seasonal finery. Once confined to the Christmas season, for years now the boats that call the Channel home have embraced cherry blossom season too. We have already got lights, and lanterns and bridges. I suspect parasols and pagodas are on the way. It gets more than a little competitive down here, with prizes and bragging rights on the line.

It also brings out the cooperative, community feel that makes living at the marina different from the twenty plus places I have lived before buying a boat and moving here last summer. At Christmas my dockmates shared tips on laser controls and passed around extra lights, zip ties and lumber. With the National Cherry Blossom Festival just days away, workshop space under winter shrink wrap is being shared with neighbors with a little less elbow room and smaller tool chests. Advice and a pair of helping hands are usually just a slip away.

Marina management gets into the act, too.

They are lighting up office space and dock gates, building some ferocious floating fish and helping plan a pretty spectacular day on the waterfront on April 7. With the National Cherry Blossom Festival, the Washington Waterfront Association, the Port of Washington Yacht Club and the Gangplank Slipholders Association they will be helping put on the Southwest Waterfront Fireworks Festival that should bring thousands of visitors to our sometimes sleepy quadrant of the city.

We don't mind sharing. In fact we can be downright exhibitionist after a long winter on a small boat. So come on down to the waterfront and drink in the lights. Wave to us on the gangplank. Ask us about life on the water. And enjoy the chance to experience the largest live-aboard community on the East Coast.

The Zumba Gold exercise/dance class at King Greenleaf Recreation Center is a low-impact, Latin-inspired class provided to seniors, beginners and those folks with limited mobility. The class is offered on Fridays, 11 am to noon, as a part of the YMCA Fit & Well Seniors Program and is FREE to all DC residents 55 years old and over.

As the YMCA describes it, "Zumba Gold strives to improve balance, strength, flexibility and, most importantly, cardiovascular health." Participants are encouraged to bring a water bottle and towel to class.

The beauty of Zumba is you don't need to know how to dance. Zumba is a party atmosphere featuring upbeat music and contemporary rhythms featuring Latin, rock, hip hop, reggae, R&B, soul, country and more.

Southwest Community Gardens

Sweet carrots, juicy tomatoes, crisp lettuce—these are just some of the fresh produce that gardeners throughout Southwest Washington are preparing to plant in the coming weeks. But with two of the Southwest community gardens marked for redevelopment—the Water Street Garden as part of The Wharf and the garden located between the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum and the U.S. Department of Education slated for the Eisenhower Memorial—local enthusiasts are seeking a new permanent space to grow their flowers, herbs and vegetables.

At Delaware and I Streets, Lansburgh Park, a vast grassy field that is largely ignored by Southwest residents is a promising location for a new community garden. The park is spacious enough to accommodate forty plots alongside a dog park, playground, picnic area and more.

Community gardens offer city residents living in apartments or with tiny back yards the opportunity to grow healthy, nutritious food often at a more affordable price than can be found in local grocery stores. Community gardens are also great centers of activity, bringing people together over a shared passion or simple curiosity about what is flourishing in the garden. The added presence of gardeners at all hours of the day can make city parks feel safer, and the active use of communities' green spaces helps them remain green.

A design charrette—a meeting to get community input on improvements to Lansburgh Park and to discuss potential uses of the space—will be held in March. The organizers are soliciting feedback on the plans for a community garden. If you are interested in becoming part of the community garden at Lansburgh Park, please email swdcgardeners@gmail.com

As Southwesterners know, Lansburgh Park features open space, mature trees, park benches, a pavilion, a hill, and active uses like tennis courts. The design sensitively accommodates a mix of uses. However in recent years, no recreational activity—organized or spontaneous, has occurred at the park. Representing the largest and most centrally located public space in Southwest, Lansburgh Park is a woefully underutilized community asset.

Recognizing this unfortunate state, the "Friends of Lansburgh Park" was formed by stakeholders including the Advisory Neighborhood Commission, the Southwest Neighborhood Assembly, and other interested users with the assistance of Tommy Wells' office and the DC Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR). To kick start the planning and improvement process, the Friends of Lansburgh Park is organizing an open house with the assistance of DPR and Tommy Wells' office.

Southwest Waterfront Fireworks Festival

Waterfront Festival to Feature Japanese Fireworks

(Adapted from a feature by Corinne Whiting in the 2012 NCBF commemorative program)

The Southwest Waterfront Fireworks Festival, in partnership with the Washington Waterfront Association, Hoffman-Madison Waterfront, and the Festival and presented by Safeway and The Washington Examiner, returns Saturday, April 7, from 1 to 9 p.m. This year's event includes a special display of Japanese fireworks, presented by the City of Nagaoka, Japan. Nagaoka is renowned throughout Japan for its spectacular two-day fireworks festival.

For the Centennial, Nagaoka and supporters bring the fireworks show to D.C. as a symbol of world peace, friendship between the two countries, and to express appreciation for U.S. support following the 2011 Japan earthquake and Pacific Tsunami. The display will begin with three white fireworks to evoke the feeling of tranquility.

In Japan, fireworks originally honored those who had lost their lives, but today the Japanese set off fireworks for celebrations as well. Each firework is meant to be appreciated individually, mirroring the philosophy that views cherry blossoms as fleeting beauty. These fireworks differ from those typically seen in the U.S. due to their hues and the manner in which they linger in the air.

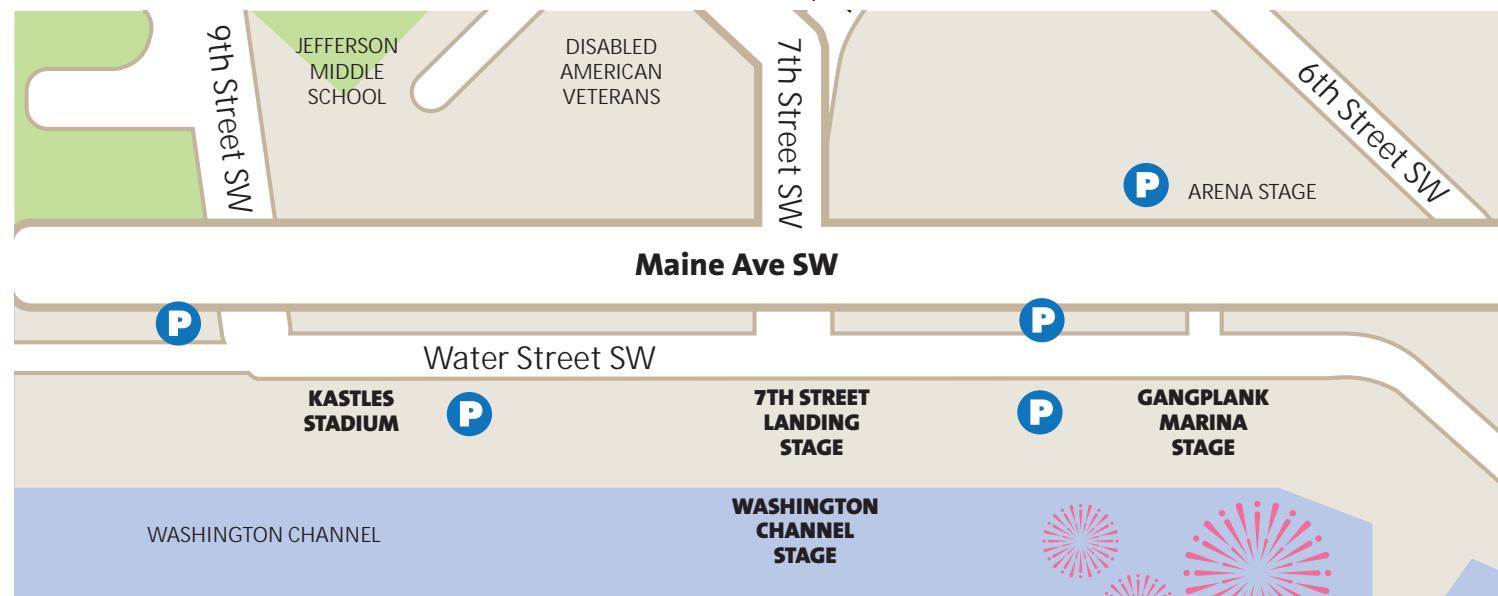

The Festival Fireworks Show lights up the sky (rain or shine) over the Washington Channel at 8:30 p.m.

Before the fireworks, families enjoy an eight-hour free extravaganza held across four blocks (Water Street SW between 6th and 9th). The event boasts hands-on activities, cultural experiences and live entertainment on four stages, including Cherry Blossom Stadium presented by Lincoln. A marketplace features artists and crafts vendors plus food trucks offering cherry-inspired foods. As nightfall nears, boats begin to illuminate in a pink palooza along the waterfront.

"This year there is more emphasis on the water," said National Cherry Blossom Festival Board Member Barbara Ehrlich, who noted that the Southwest Waterfront offers one of the city's best views of the blossoms, thanks to its location directly across from East Potomac Park.

Ehrlich, who has worked with the Southwest Waterfront Festival for the past 21 years, said the event has undergone "a gradual evolution." The community festival, formerly a separate neighborhood event that was a prelude to the Fireworks, began as an arts festival in 1991 and later expanded to include a parade of lighted boats. In 2004, the Washington Waterfront Association hosted the first mini-fest that also featured fireworks (presented by the National Cherry Blossom Festival).

Although the event now runs for a full day, in early years it lasted for only two and a half hours and had a smaller footprint.

Ehrlich credits her longtime involvement to the efforts of many individuals and groups who make the event possible, including volunteers, organizers, the military contingency (due to the proximity to Ft. McNair and Ft. Myer), boaters, the Navy and local businesses like Arena Stage, Phillips Flagship Restaurant and Entertainment Cruises.

Ehrlich said these people's "willingness to figure it out, to do the best they can" is responsible for the event's continued success.

The Parks of Southwest: Amidon Sidewalk Park

By Hayden M. Wetzel

This is the last of a series of five articles describing the history of parks in the 1950-70s Urban Renewal Project in Southwest Washington.

Redevelopment of Southwest Washington from the beginning envisioned a great deal of green public space – something not common in the earlier Southwest. This carried into the generous sidewalks and minor street amenities such as the little circles on G Street and the many closed streets made into public walkways. Fourth Street was always a major street in Southwest, and the Urban Renewal plan continued this, both in the first commercial center (which did not cut off Fourth) and the second, the Waterside Mall (which did). An imposing and inviting walk along Fourth to the new Town Center Park and then to the Mall and its plaza seemed natural to city planners.

Besides the new Mall, planners had the freedom of a new school – Amidon – which was built on the superblock created between 4th and 6th/I and G Streets in 1960. The land behind the school, running to G Street, was assigned by the National Park Service to the city “for playground purposes.” At the same time the Redevelopment

Amidon Sidewalk Park

Land Agency's (RLA) design office, headed by Stanley Sherman, began work on the “Amidon Promenade” along the western side of 4th Street to consist of “considerable planting and paving” – trees and repetitive lines of bricks, costing $200,000.

Along G Street, behind the playground, discussions from 1961 had separated a 20-foot strip

Obituary: Henry Soladay Shryock Jr.

Henry Soladay Shryock Jr., a long-time resident of Southwest, died at home at Harbour Square just short of his 100th birthday. His wife, Pauline Le Marie, survives him and remains a resident of Harbour Square. She is 100.

A native of Baltimore, Henry died on Feb. 17. He was widely recognized in the field of demographics and worked for the U.S. Army Air Corps in World War II and the U.S. Census Bureau in overseas posts including India, Korea and Japan. He later taught at Georgetown University.

Henry also was a member of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club (PATC) for a half century. He and Pauline led hikes into their 90s around the greater Washington area including along the C&O Canal.

Born on May 12, 1912, Henry grew up in Maryland. He was the oldest of three children. He received his bachelor of arts degree from St. John's College before pursuing graduate studies at Duke University. He received a doctorate of philosophy from the University of Wisconsin.

Henry was a member of the prestigious Cosmos Club for more than 40 years.

Henry's first wife, Annie Francis Shryock, who was a talented artist, died. He and his second wife, Pauline, were married for 30 years. They traveled worldwide.

Henry is survived by his sister-in-law, Mary Dickson Shryock; nieces Margaret H. Plummer and Mary Dickson Meraw; nephew Richard P. Shryock; great-nieces Carrie Plummer, Mary Meraw and Heather Meraw; great-nephews Christopher Plummer, Charlie Delph, Colt Meraw and Troy Meraw. He had no children of his own.

A memorial service was held at the Cosmos Club. Henry's interment was Feb. 27 at his family plot, on the grounds of St. Thomas Church in Owings Mills, Maryland.

In Brief: Arts & Entertainment

Portrait Artist Presentation April 4

On April 4, at 7 p.m., portrait Artist Jill Cohen will show examples from the hundreds of portraits she's painted in her over 30 year career and talk about the art of portraiture. A graduate of the University of Illinois and winner of numerous awards, both local and national, she worked in Alexandria's Torpedo Factory since the 1980's. Her favorite media are pastel and watercolor. Susan Davidson in "The Washingtonian" said "There's an Impressionistic romanticism about Jill Cohen's watercolor and pastel portraits.. (she) paints subjects of all ages, but has a particular sensitivity toward children. Q and A with the artist will follow presentation. Coffee and deserts. Donations accepted. The event is at St. Augustine's Art & Spirit Coffeeshop, 600 M St SW. For information, call (202) 554-3222.

At Arena Stage: Long Day's Journey Into Night

The Arena Stage will present Long Day's Journey Into Night March 30–May 6, 2012. This play by Eugene O'Neill is part of the Eugene O'Neill Festival and will run in the Kreeger Theater. Delusion and disenchantment have pitted the Tyrone family members against one another for decades. One fateful day, as their increasingly drunken hours slip by, they must either confront their defeated dreams or else be forever doomed to a cycle of guilt and resentment. Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical masterwork exposes the lies we tell, the deceptions we craft, and the undercurrent of compassion that, if uncovered, can redeem us in the end. This Pulitzer Prize-winning American treasure "restores the drama to literature and the theater to art" (New York Times).

National Gallery hosts 'Colorful Realm'

The Cherry Blossom Centennial celebrates the 100th anniversary of the planting of the first trees — a gift of Japan to the United States — in the Tidal Basin on March 27, 1912. (The Festival was first held in 1935.)

In honor of this event, The National Gallery of Art is hosting an extraordinary loan from the Imperial Household.

Colorful Realm of Living Beings (J. Doshoku sai-e; c. 1757–1766) is the premier example of the bird-and-flower tradition. Described as both dynamic and meditative, this 30-scroll set transcends the natural world to capture the essence of the Buddha nature itself.

AMIDON

from Amidon and placed it outside the school's fence. ("The plans for this area became the subject of extended debate," noted an official.) This area, including benches interspersed with "games" and the current brick "play sculpture," was finalized in 1965. The park was built in 1967 when it was featured in the RLA's annual report. A photo of children climbing on the brick structure includes Sherman's own son. Although never officially named, it is called Amidon Sidewalk Park in the RLA report, and that seems a good title.

This pocket of green adds grace and calm to the neighborhood. One need only walk two blocks west on G Street to 6th, where the playground of Jefferson Junior High School simply runs to the street and then a bare fence. A narrow sidewalk and a row of rather small trees (with no benches) make this stretch of G Street barren and uninviting. How much nicer if it also had a little slice of park running alongside it.

The brick "play sculpture," in 1967.

The research for this project, conducted at the request of the Southwest Neighborhood Assembly, was conducted utilizing documents of the government agencies involved in the Urban Renewal Project. The author is a Washington tour guide and active preservationist.

Black Historic Figures Teach Valuable Lessons in 'K.C.'s Dream'

By Meg Brinckman

Midon-Bowen Elementary School students, under the direction of Ms. Edgar, Special Education Teacher, Ms. Gray, Third Grade Teacher, and Ms. Zeiler, Librarian, presented a one-act play, "K.C.'s Dream" by Brenda B. Covert to students and parents. The play uses a dream sequence to bring forward the accomplishments of black civil rights fighters, scientists, business people and sports figures.

The play begins with K.C., played by Nevaeh Edwards, at the end of a long day spent grappling with issues of race and equality in her class at school. She is feeling the sting of comments made by fellow students because she is black. Harriet Tubman, played by Jaida Murray, appears in her dream and says, "You and I need to have a talk." Tubman proceeds to remind K.C. that what she did to survive slavery in the time of the Underground Railroad took courage and most of all believing in oneself.

George Washington Carver (Phillip Thomas), whom K.C. recognizes as "the peanut butter guy," points out that education was the key to his ability to help make life better for southern farmers. He adds that believing in yourself means hard work and no excuses. Madam C.J. Walker (Denitra McDonald), who built her business in the early 1900s—a time when she did not have the right to vote and few women of any race were developing businesses—tells K.C. to ignore those who "badmouth you" and believe in yourself.

In succession Martin Luther King (Clarence Eggleston), Coretta Scott King (Aarianna Scott), Oprah Winfrey (Shomari Edwards), Michael Jordan (Trevon Evans) and President Barack Obama (Khalil Warren) each appear to K.C. They tell of their contributions to the country at large and to the black community. They remind her that it took hard work and sacrifices to make those gains. The Chorus (Tasia Bailey, Dayonna Harris and Aleema Banks) echo the underlying theme, "believe in yourself."

(e)merge Art Fair Accepting Exhibitor Applications

The second edition of the (e)merge art fair will take place Oct. 4–7, within blocks of the museums on the National Mall, at the modernist Morris Lapidus-designed Capitol Skyline hotel.

The 2011 inaugural edition of (e)merge featured 80 vetted exhibitors with works by artists from 21 countries. More than 5500 attendees visited the gallery and artist exhibitions, performances, panel discussions, curatorial museum walk-throughs and private collection tours.

(e)merge has partnered with The National Gallery of Art, The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, The Phillips Collection, The Corcoran Gallery of Art and The National Museum of Women in the Arts to develop special events and programs surrounding the time of the upcoming fair.

Online applications are now being accepted for galleries, nonprofit spaces and artists. The application deadline is April 27.

Art may include works in all media: installation, painting, photography, new media, performance, sculpture, works on paper and video. Whereas work in all media will be carefully considered, projects involving experimental works in non-traditional formats are especially encouraged. Such work may include installation, conceptual art, performance, new media or the inventive use of materials to express challenging concepts.

Artists whose proposals are accepted by the selection committee will be provided with exhibition space at the fair free of charge. To be eligible for artist exhibition space, artist applicants must be currently without gallery representation and may have had solo gallery shows but may not have had solo museum or Kunsthalle exhibitions.

Additional information may be found by visiting the exhibitor services page at www.emergeartfair.com/exhibitor-services or emailing at info@emergeartfair.com.

Southwest Chamber Players Announce 15th Anniversary Concert

In conjunction with the National Cherry Blossom Festival, the Southwest Chamber Players (SWCP), our community's resident chamber music group, will present a gala concert program on Friday, March 30, at Saint Augustine's Episcopal Church at Maine Avenue and Sixth Street beginning at 7:30pm. As is customary, admission is free; however, contributions are greatly appreciated.

The SWCP has presented virtually monthly concerts ever since its March 1997 founding. That's 161 concerts in all! And this one will be quite extravagant.

The centerpiece is the newly commissioned Piano Trio by New York composer Lembit Beecher, which will also be played by Mr. Beecher. Surrounding this work will be a representative sampling of the group's past repertoire to include works of J.S. Bach, Mozart, Schubert, Brahms, Mendelssohn and more.

The players, many of whose pedigrees are quite eminent, will include the following individuals: Regino Madrid and Emily Daggett Smith, violin; Sara Hart, viola; Charlie Powers and Karen Ouzounian, cello; Gwyn Jones, flute; Jerry Schwarz and Bernard Arons, clarinet; Dilyana Kirova, bassoon; Marje Palmieri, Joyce Bouvier, and C.J. Reden-Liotta, singers; and David Ehrlich and Lembit Beecher, piano.

Japanese Kimono Exhibit and Fundraiser

In honor of the 100-year anniversary of the gift of trees from Tokyo to Washington, D.C., a special kimono exhibit and fundraiser, 100 years of Japanese Kimono, is taking place at the Mandarin Oriental (1330 Maryland Ave., SW) Feb. 15 through April 30, 2012. Hours vary by day, please call 301-806-0337 before your visit.

The collection features intricate, beautiful and finely woven kimono time span and showcases techniques and the evolution of kimono-making over 100 years. Paul MacLardy and Tena Turner of Arise Bazaar Gallery of Japanese and Asian artifacts are curators of the exhibit. Their carefully selected display expresses a shared vision of motifs that demonstrate Japanese culture, society and history. All kimono are from the personal collection of MacLardy, Arise Gallery and several collectors.

Coinciding with the exhibit, a 3-day fundraiser will take place in the Corcoran Room of the hotel on April 4 (5–8 p.m.), and April 5–6 (noon–8 p.m.). Beautiful kimono will be on sale, as well as accessories, jewelry, and a variety of Japanese items including yukata robes, obi socks, and obi and getta shoes. MacLardy, a Japanese textile connoisseur, will sign copies of his book, Kimono, Vanishing Tradition. A collection of official National Cherry Blossom Festival merchandise will also be available. To preview the offerings, visit arisedc.net and nationalcherryblossomfestival.org

The kimono available will appeal to a wide range of tastes and budgets. The collection includes a range of kimono starting at $10, attractive to quilters and sewers, to kimono from $245 to $1,000 for lovers of fashion and traditional Japanese wear.

On April 14, 1912, the R.M.S. Titanic struck an iceberg off the coast of Newfoundland during its maiden voyage from Southampton to New York. It was considered the greatest technological achievement of its time, but in less than 3 hours, Titanic sank to the bottom of the Atlantic, and 1,517 lives were lost.

On April 14, 2012, it will have been one hundred years since the sinking of the Titanic, and yet we remain captivated by its tragic story and the tales of heroism that have been handed down through generations. Forever etched into our collective consciousness are the stories of men who stood aside so that women and children could be saved; of a father who selflessly put his two young sons in a lifeboat, knowing he would never see them again; of a woman who refused to leave her husband's side, even though it meant certain death; of the brave musicians who kept playing till the very end to comfort those who stayed behind on the doomed ship.

Southwest DC may be thousands of miles away from the site of the Titanic tragedy, but we have a special connection to the Titanic. The Titanic Memorial is a unique feature of our Waterfront that is well-known and loved by many Southwesterners. Tucked away in a quiet corner of Waterfront Park next to Fort McNair, this memorial is dedicated to the men who gave their lives during the sinking of the Titanic so that women and children might be saved.

I first encountered the Woman's Titanic Memorial (its original name) from the Washington Channel as a sailing instructor. From this vantage point, the memorial appears nothing less than the crucifixion of Christ. This misapprehension in this led to sailing instructions that went something like "Take us down south of Jesus and come about." As it turns out, the memorial is about self-sacrifice, albeit patriarchal stereotypes regarding the role of men and women in the early twentieth century.

Considering its designer Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney was anything but conventional, one biographer described her as "existing in two worlds. In one, she was the perfect, icy formal uptown matron ... in [the] other she was a passionate bohemian who took lover after lover; a lady bountiful to impoverished American artists with whom she shared a riotous life in Greenwich Village," it is difficult to reconcile her life as an artist with the art she produced.

In addition to being an heiress to the New York Railroad and Standard Oil fortunes, Whitney, had a fair bit of maritime history in her family. Her great grandfather was Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, and her father-in-law, Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney. More to the point, she had experienced the direct effects of maritime disaster as her own brother, Alfred Vanderbilt, would perish in the sinking of the Lusitania the same year she began bronze studies for the Woman's Titanic Memorial. Several critics have noted a striking resemblance between the memorial's features and her brother's.

After the sinking of the Titanic in 1912, an organization which went by the same name as the memorial was formed in Washington and, by July, occupied multiple offices collecting donations from across the country for construction of a memorial, as the New York Times described, to commemorate "woman's tribute to the chivalry and bravery of man as exemplified in the Titanic disaster." Within two years, the organization had raised $43,000 towards the $50,000 commission for the winning design.

On January 14, 1914, the Washington Fine Arts Commission selected Whitney's design which, according to the Commission, "showed the figure of Heroism, a man of noble proportions, fifteen feet high, the face, arms, and whole posture of the body exemplifying a willing sacrifice, a smiling welcome to death," over seven other "sculptors of prominence."

Whitney began bronze studies for the final work in 1915. One of these has survived in Colington, Maryland at the Holy Trinity Cemetery affixed to the gravesite of a Whitney relative.

This early study, signed and dated by Whitney, differs from the Woman's Titanic Memorial in that the male figure is completely nude with drapery flowing over his shoulder.

The final work, which is considered Whitney's greatest achievement in sculpture, was unveiled by President Taft's widow on May 26, 1931, along Rock Creek Parkway near New Hampshire Avenue. The 18-foot figure was actually sculpted by John Horrigan from a single block of red granite in Quincy, Massachusetts. The entire work, including its 6-foot pedestal and 30-foot long exedra designed by the architect of the Lincoln Memorial, Henry Bacon, was completed in 1930.

In 1966, the Memorial was removed and stored at Ft. Washington, Maryland during the construction of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. It was re-erected in 1968 without ceremony on the Washington Channel.

Those responsible for its current site selection could hardly have picked a more inauspicious location. Leaving aside whether Whitney or the memorial merit inclusion in the pantheon of American art, the memorial remains relevant, not as an homage to chivalry as the Committee intended but, far more darkly, industrialization's gift to modernity—spectacular carnage on an unprecedented scale. This is, after all, the very essence of the fascination with the Titanic and is equally apropos for what would establish itself as the most violent century in history.

WHARF

An extra mews was added to separate the office building and hotel planned for parcel 3. In addition, the facades have been broken down at street level to have more of a human scale to them.

The Hoffman Madison Waterfront team is working with Washington Gas on building a Combined Heating and Power Facility (or Co-Gen plant) on Maine Avenue that would use clean-burning natural gas to power the rest of the development. As a result of the Co-Gen plant, over 1,000 coal cars per year will be saved since most of the city is powered using coal fuel.

Next up was Stan Eckstut from Perkins Eastman, who gave an overview of what's planned in the development. As much attention was given to the water plan as the land plan, and in fact, the water plan was done first.

Eckstut mentioned that the only other city in the United States that has a comprehensive water plan for their waterfront is Baltimore. Along the water's edge at The Wharf, there will be a continuous bench (about 2,000 feet) instead of a railing, so people can enjoy the water more easily. Lighting will be near the base for safety purposes at night, as well as blue lighting along the water's edge to serve as a way to define the waterfront that can be seen from passersby crossing the Case Bridge into the District.

The Transit Pier is triangular in shape and is located near Parcel 2. This is where most of the dinner cruise ships, water taxi, and charter boats will dock. Music barges will also dock here for festivals.

Down-channel from the Transit Pier is the District Pier, which will serve as the ceremonial entrance for tall ships and other vessels from around the world that visit the city. The District Pier is very large - 650 feet long (more than twice as long as a football field), stretching from Maine Avenue out into the Washington Channel. The public space created here will be larger than comparable spaces in other cities, including Covent Garden in London, outside of Faneuil Hall in Boston, or Harborplace in Baltimore. District Pier is designed to serve a variety of purposes, with permanent scaffolding along the sides to facilitate the set-up for events and festivals throughout the year.

For instance, the pier can serve as a venue for the National Cherry Blossom Festival, or become a large ice rink in the winter. Closer to Maine Avenue, there will be a large water feature called Water Court next to where people will emerge from a parking garage underneath the District Pier. At the channel end of the pier, there will be the Dock Master building with a pavilion affording views out to the water and back towards the city.

On the land side of the development, the design of the retail space along the wharf and Maine Avenue will vary, but will be smaller format with no big box retail. Along the wharf there will include mostly restaurants, as well as kiosks, while Maine Avenue retail will focus more on neighborhood-serving retail. Meanwhile, retail along the mews will be cafes, and some entertainment venues along what is dubbed "Jazz Alley" between Parcel 4 and Parcel 5.

The design of the buildings will include more masonry than glass in most areas, with the exception of the condo building planned for Parcel 4. Buildings facing Maine Avenue will more closely resemble the design of buildings in the rest of the city, while the wharf-facing buildings will have more windows to allow views out to the water. In addition, at least 50% of the roofs will be green.

Parking will all be below grade, which is rare for waterfronts in the United States and will accommodate around 1,500 cars. Nearly the same amount of bike parking spaces will be provided. A second Capital Bikeshare station will be installed at 9th Street and Maine Avenue to join the one already at 7th Street. Other planned public spaces in Phase I include 7th Street Park and Waterfront Park.

After Mr. Eckstut's presentation, Shawn Seaman from PN Hoffman went over the sustainability measures planned for the development. The Wharf will seek LEED-New Development Gold, while the individual buildings will strive for a minimum of LEED-Silver. An elaborate 675,000 gallon cistern system will be constructed to capture the more than 25 million gallons of runoff each year that currently dumps into the Washington Channel due to the lack of permeable surfaces at present. The captured runoff will be recycled to the greatest extent possible, including the provision of chilled water for the Co-Gen plant. Solar power may also be used for lighting throughout the development.

ANC 6D Business Meeting Highlights

By B. K. Lunde

On March 12, the Commission heard a presentation by Cecille Chen, head of SWNA's SW Heritage project on plans to install a Public Information Display near the Waterfront Metro Station, by the door of Safeway. It will show when the next trains are coming and have information about the attractions in our neighborhood, such as the plays at Arena Stage and the cruises on the river. The ANC voted to send a letter to the DC Department of Transportation supporting the development of the display.

Bridget Gonzales of the group, PAWS of Southwest reported on their proposal to create a dog park, as a place for dogs to socialize and exercise, off leash. The ANC agreed to write a letter to the DC Department of Parks and Recreation recognizing the PAWS of Southwest and supporting its work for a dog park. They have identified Lansburgh Park as a suitable location. Two hundred and sixteen people have signed a petition for the park at www.petitions.com/petition/swdogpark/.

Gene Solon pointed out that the developers of the proposed Wharf project have not yet presented an Environmental Impact Statement for the development, and that the National Marine Fisheries Service has questioned the five piers that The Wharf propose building into the Washington Channel in their $1.5 billion project.

The Cherry Blossom Festival will go on from March 20-April 17. Saturday, April 7, will be the special time for Southwest Washington. From 1-9 PM, Water Street is expected to attract 30,000 people for various events from the U.S. Army Band to Nen Daiko Japanese Drummers. Thirty minutes of fireworks, brought over from Japan, will start at 8:30.

Barbara Ehrlich, a prominent Southwester, is the Secretary of the National Cherry Blossom Festival. She reported that the Washington Examiner will have a huge guide to the entire festival and a 96 page booklet will be distributed at events. Jay Nickerson, chair of the Washington Waterfront Association announced 25 art projects to be unveiled at the Cherry Blossom Festival, including a very large xylophone to be installed in front of Arena Stage. People will be allowed to play it with provided hammers. Also, a floating pentagon, eleven feet across, is coming to the Washington Channel. It will play songs from World War 1 through the 1960's, but not late at night.

The ANC Commissioners passed a Resolution of Appreciation for Dr. Coralie Farlee in recognition of her devoted service for six years as the first Chairman of the ANC's Alcohol Beverage Control Committee. They said she "brought focus to a process that was previously handled in less than a tidy manner and has solidly established a reputation for our Southwest and near SE neighborhood as one which handles our alcohol beverage control issues with business-like precision so that applicants know where they stand and what they need to do to expedite the regulatory process – all the while protecting the greater interests of our neighborhood residents" Dr. Coralie Farlee resigned, and the board appointed Christopher Thiemann as the Chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Committee.

The next regular business meeting of ANC 6D is scheduled for Monday, April 9 at 7 p.m., in the District Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs (DCRA) Hearing Room, 1100 Fourth St. SW, 2nd Floor. For additional information or a meeting agenda, visit www.acn6d.org

Local residents at the 2011 Neighborhood Night.

Nationals Neighborhood Night is April 19

To celebrate the return of Major League baseball to the Southwest and near-Southeast community, the Nationals are inviting local residents out to Neighborhood Night at Nationals Park on Thursday, April 19, at 7:05 p.m.

The team will honor the vibrant spirit of the neighborhood by featuring local residents in various pregame activities, including throwing out the first pitch, delivering the lineup card and greeting the players as they take their positions on the field.

"We're excited to kick off the start of the 2012 season by welcoming local residents back to Nationals Park for Neighborhood Night," Nationals Director of Community Relations Israel Negron said.

As part of their commitment to engaging the neighborhood surrounding Nationals Park, the team supports community-based programs and

Notes On the Nats: N'Attitude

By Zev Feder

The Washington Nationals have invited its fan base to contribute ideas for their new N'Attitude campaign. Following a very productive off-season, in which the team has revamped its starting pitching rotation and seems well-prepared to compete with their division rivals, N'Attitude is a confident challenge and call to arms. (Like arms named Strasberg, Gonzalez, Zimmermann, Jackson, Storen, Clippard, Rodriguez, etc.?) Here is my contribution to their campaign: Sadaharu Oh, Bill Mazeroski and Pete Rose.

In sports, and particularly in baseball, you have control of your behavior, your PTCE — preparation, training, conditioning and effort — which will crucially impact but will not control your results. PTCE is where I look to determine attitude.

First, Sadaharu Oh: The Babe Ruth of Japanese baseball. My introduction to baseball in Japan came from reading what I remember as Oh's autobiography some decades ago. Unless things have changed in that short time span — and I hope not — Japanese players honor the game. It starts with disciplined hard work to master technique and maximize ability; then bowing as you cross the foul lines onto the field of play to honor the game you are engaging in; and, finally, demonstrating that respect for the game and for your opponents by hustle and effort.

Pete Rose: Mr. Hustle and Effort. Pete ran to first base every time. If the pitcher threw ball four, he ran to first. If Rose hit a pop-up anywhere on the field, he ran hard. And a grounder in the infield was a foot race every time. Why? Because some percentage of such batted balls are hesitated on, bobbled or dropped and being in position to take advantage of the albeit rare mistake or bit of luck is what a ballplayer who honors the game does. (We won't talk about Pete's off-field issues.)

Bill Mazeroski: I only saw him play a few times. He played my position, second base, so I noticed him because of his attitude. What I saw in his body language when he fielded a ground ball was total confidence, even arrogance. But where that came from was his technique. (For the infielders out there, he got down in front of a grounder low enough that not only his hands were down but his eye level was down.) His training and preparation brought him the confidence that so impressed me.

I think the N'Attitude Initiative that the Nationals have engaged in has great potential. Attitude, and PTCE, is infectious and will build fan-loyalty to the team. But more broadly, sports heroes are role models and attitude affects success in life just as it does on the playing field. N'Attitude, if expressed effectively, can be applied in our schools and in our communities to great advantage. Children, particularly, in these times of celebrity glorification, need their basic education to include the attitude skills that lead to success and happiness in life, just as they do on the ballfield.
